HURRICANE IN HAVANA PUTS END TO FIGHT

Florida Warned Of An Approaching Storm Of Severity

BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS
Hurricane warnings flew throughout the Florida Keys today and shipping hurried to cover as two tropical storms moved out of the Caribbean.
The Weather Bureau at Washington reported a disturbance centering about 60 miles south-southwest of Cienfuegos apparently moving northward at about nine miles an hour. Another storm was reported about 370 miles north-northeast of Turk's Island, apparently of slight intensity.
The Key West Weather Bureau said the storm moving northward or north-northwestward across Cuba, apparently was headed for the extreme southern tip of Florida. Winds, probably of hurricane force, could be expected by noon, the Bureau said.

High Wind at Havana
A wind of 60 mile velocity was reported at Havana early today, leveling some trees and billboards. A blow that reached 50 miles an hour did slight damage at Kingston, Jamaica.

A northwest wind was blowing 21 to 24 miles an hour at Key West and light but steady rain was falling. Meteorologist R. W. Gray at Miami predicted gale winds for the Miami area. Gray said the maximum velocity of gales is 54 miles an hour, which he said was not dangerous.

Northeast storm warnings were hoisted on the Florida west coast to Boca Grande, 25 miles north of Fort Myers, and on the east coast as far north as Titusville.

GALE STOPS FIGHTING
Havana, Oct. 4.—(AP)—A 70-mile-an-hour gale swept Havana today and enforced a moratorium on disorders, shootings, commerce, and political troubles.

Cubans were compelled to remain indoors, and the Capital experienced its most peaceful night in a week. A few shots were heard near the presidential palace early in the evening, but later the whistle of the wind held sway where only 24 hours before bullets had whined.

Belen Observatory reported this morning that a disturbance of slight intensity was crossing Matanzas and Havana provinces and was moving northward toward the Florida straits.

Telephone lines were broken in Havana. Trees were uprooted high seas and heavy winds were forecast for later today. Reports from Matanzas said no serious damage had been done.

Storm Increasing
The National Observatory reported that the storm was increasing in intensity as it moved northward.

Soldiers were deployed about the United States embassy following rumors of a plot to bomb it. The home of former President Mario G. Q. Menocal was searched by soldiers while machine guns were trained on the house. An officer said rifles and ammunition were found.

A check today of the dead in Monday's street fighting and battle at the National Hotel put the total at 54. Of the officers who resisted the attack of soldiers on the hotel, 17 were killed, more than 20 wounded, and 368 were imprisoned in Principe and Cabana fortresses.

Twenty-seven victims of the day-long National Hotel warfare were buried last night in Colon cemetery, while the storm raged and soldiers held their rifles ready should any disorder occur.

Springfield, Ill., Oct. 4.—(AP)—The Lantz bills, drafted to bring them within the scope of the call for the special session, were introduced in the state Senate today.

Lawrenceville, Ill., Oct. 4.—(AP)—Capt. L. E. Cook of Company L, 130th Infantry, Illinois National Guard, notified his men today to be ready for a call to duty at Harrisburg, where bombings and shootings in the mine troubles had brought a state of terror.

Capt. Cook said he had not received orders from the Adjutant General to proceed to Harrisburg, but anticipated them.

BULLETIN
Sullivan, Ind., Oct. 4.—(AP)—The Starbuck mine, which has been operating on a cooperative basis, has been under guard for several months. It was the scene of disorders a year ago when union sympathizers sought to persuade miners to cease working the shaft on the cooperative plan.

STEEL WORKERS SHOT
Ambleside, Pa., Oct. 4.—(AP)—Two men were critically wounded and several others were clubbed today in a clash between 300 pickets and 100 steel workers outside the Spang-Chaffin Company's plant.

The crowd fell back after several shots were fired from the plant entrance and Deputy Sheriffs laid down a tear gas attack.

The two most seriously hurt are Al Curry, 30, a steel worker, and Luke Starchenko, 37, a picket. Starchenko was shot in the abdomen and Curry suffered a fractured skull. Physicians at Valley hospital in Sewickley said both may die.

As disorder spread into the Beaver Valley more than two-thirds of the 75,000 soft coal miners in western Pennsylvania remained out despite orders from their leaders to go back to work today.

Picketing at mines was widespread but no violence was reported.

Picket lines also were maintained at the Clairton plant of the Carnegie Steel Company, and at the Weirton and Clarksburg, W. Va., and Steubenville, O., operations of the Weirton Steel Company.

SALINE CO. IN TERROR
Harrisburg, Ill., October 4.—(AP)—Saline county, the focal point in the bitter fight between the Progressive Miners Union and the United Mine Workers for supremacy in the coal fields was in a virtual state of terror today following a night of bombings and periodic gunfire.

The most serious disorders occurred in Harrisburg and Galatia. Dynamite bombs rocked six homes here and shattered windows, while one man was wounded by gunfire in Galatia.

The first bomb went off about 3 A. M. according to police. It shattered windows in the home of John H. Davis and damaged windows in six other homes. Davis is said to be a United Mine worker sympathizer.

Although many of the principals failed to register enough interest in the state wide poll to vote, Whitten, manager of the Illinois High School Athletic Association, said the vote so far was 319 in favor of a 16-team field with only 67 opposed.

The vote, merely advisory, will be referred to the Board of Control at its meeting in Peoria tomorrow night. It is not known whether the board will take definite action on the proposal at that time.

GOVERNMENT IS NEARING END OF LOTTERY TRIAL

Chart Showing Division Of Moose Fund Is Introduced

New York, Oct. 4.—(AP)—The finances of alleged Loyal Order of Moose lotteries were the subject of government scrutiny today as the prosecution of United States Senator James J. Davis neared its end before Federal Judge Johnson J. Hayes.

Davis, who is Director-General of Moose, and Theodore G. Miller, head of the Moose propagation department are on trial on an indictment which charges they caused lottery tickets to be transported in interstate commerce.

Prosecutor Louis Mead Treadwell introduced evidence through Jacob Heffler, a government accountant, charts setting forth the distribution of moneys received from enterprises known as the "1930 Mooseheart Charity Ball" and the "1931 Mooseheart Charity Ball."

To Show Design
The 1930 evidence has been admitted to the trial only as competent to show design or plan for the offense charged in 1931.

The 1931 chart, modified to meet defense objections started with a box enclosing the legend, "to propagation department $1,067,739.75." From this were two lines, one to a box reading, "expenses $617,728.75," the other to a box reading, "net expense $450,000." This item was originally headed "profit."

Three lines from this led to these items: "Mooseheart $150,000," "B. C. McGuire $150,000," and a detailed account reading, "paid on note of organization department $100,000; Liberty Bond & Mortgage Company $17,850.29; James J. Davis, personal account $15,360; T. G. Miller $16,849.71."

The government contends that Davis was and is owner of the Moose organization department, and therefore was the receiver of any money paid to that department.

Motor trouble apparently was the cause of the crash. Persons living nearby said they heard the engines of the bi-motored plane missing as it dropped into the woods.

VIRGINIA FOR REPEAL: MADE SCORE 32 TO 0

Old Dominion Turns Thumbs Down On Dry Statutes

Richmond, Va., Oct. 4.—(AP)—Virginia made the score by states 32 to 0 today in favor of repeal of the 18th amendment.

The Old Dominion, one of the bulwarks of prohibition since 1914, turned thumbs down yesterday on the amendment it had been the second to ratify and at the same time recommended the repeal of the Layman Act, state dry law.

Almost complete returns indicated that every district in the state had joined the repeal movement, with a majority of the counties joining the cities in opposition to the prohibition regime. Repeal majorities were heaviest, however, in the centers of population with Richmond, Norfolk, Roanoke, Newport News and Lynchburg piling up substantial margins that ranged as high as four to one and more.

Although belated returns from some of the dry areas cut down the repeal ratio slightly it was early apparent that the anti-prohibitionists would win with votes to spare.

FIRE BELIEVED OF INCENDIARY INCEPTION NOW

Suspect Held; A Score Of Bodies Still In Charred Canyon

Los Angeles, Oct. 4.—(AP)—With thirty-six bodies recovered and county officials reporting that the fire-swept 1,000 acre tract in Mineral Wells canyon holds from 20 to 25 additional victims of yesterday's brush fire, police today took in custody a man and booked him for suspicion of arson.

The suspect, Robert D. Barr, 29, an unemployed motion picture projectionist, was traced through the license number of an automobile today to have been parked near the scene of the fire. Witnesses, whose names police did not disclose, were reported to have told police they saw a man leave the automobile, enter the canyon and set fire to the brush.

When arrested, Barr had several kerosene-soaked rags in his possession, police said. He made no statement to them.

The arson angle into the investigation of the blaze was injected after police had been working on the theory that a cigarette tossed into the brush by one of the victims had caused the fire.

Besides the 36 recovered, R. C. Huston, Assistant Superintendent of County Charities, said 20 or 25 more bodies lay in a deep ravine but could not be removed at once. Approximately 100 men were in hospitals, many of them injured seriously in the mad scramble up the sides of the box-like canyon that became a raging inferno when a strong wind fanned the brush fire they were attempting to extinguish.

Throughout the night thousands of relatives of the more than 3,700 workers on the roads of the park crowded about the county morgue and a hastily improvised mortuary. A cordon of police was required to hold them in check as they watched through tear-dimmed eyes the long string of stretchers, carried through the doors.

None Identified Early
So badly were the bodies burned that not a single victim of the fire had been identified this morning.

Frank Merrill, Superintendent of Griffith Park, blamed the catastrophe to "lack of experience in brush fire fighting" on the part of those who died and the men who sent them into the canyon of death.

Fire Chief Ralph Scott corroborated Merrill's views by the statement "it was suicide to send those men into a walled-in canyon whose entrance was blocked by raging flames and whose only other means of exit was a winding cow-path up the wall of the ravine."

Followed Orders Blindly
Blindly following orders of their foremen, more than a thousand workmen streamed into the smoke-like Mineral Wells canyon.

Deep in the canyon, a small area was burning. There was little or no wind, the flames and smoke from the burning scrub oak growth in the canyon's floor, shooting straight upward.

Suddenly a wind whipped down into the canyon, fanning the blaze into a furnace of death sweeping outward from its center. In a few seconds, the approximately 1,500 men who had entered the canyon were scrambling up its steep sides.

The cowpath became a line of fighting, sweltering, cursing, praying in humanity. The strong clambered over the weak. With death crackling at their heels the workmen struggled upward.

Survivors said the flames jumped as high as 100 feet at the time, catching up with and blazing down the struggling men suffocated by the wall of smoke that rolled over them or struck down by the flames.

One pair had almost reached the canyon's rim. One of the two, a stalwart, had been pushing his fellow struggler upward when the flames.

One formula for finding out how long one should live is: Add the lives of your parents and four grandparents divide the total by six and for every five years that exceeds 60, add a year; the result is the approximate length of your life.

GOVERNOR ASKS
ILLINOIS TOWNS
TO SPEED WORKSUrges Prompt Applications For Federal Aid
In Improvements

Springfield, Ill., Oct. 4.—(AP)—
An appeal for prompt action by Illinois cities in applying for Federal aid for public works projects was issued today by Governor Homer.

"The public works program provided an efficient form of relief for the unemployed," the Governor said. "It will enable us to accelerate our withdrawal from a system of relief that has become dangerously close to the point of becoming a sole. We do not want a permanent dole system in this state or country. We have seen the disastrous effects of it in other nations."

Because of preliminary work and recommendations several weeks ago of his committee on unemployment, Horner said Illinois undoubtedly would be among the first states to receive substantial financing from the Federal government for public works projects.

"Of course," he continued, "I do not urge municipalities and other sub-divisions of the state that already are hopelessly in debt to increase their burdens upon their taxpayers, but I do urge action when circumstances justify the construction of needed public projects that cannot be financed out of current revenue and which can be financed at a reasonable cost under the Federal public works program."

In a telegram to Secretary Ives of the Interior, Horner characterized as "erroneous" a statement that Illinois is lagging in its cooperation with the Federal highway construction and public works program.

GRANTS ANNOUNCED
Washington, Oct. 4.—(AP)—The Public Works Administration today allotted $5,411,900 for 61 non-Federal projects in 22 states and Hawaii which is estimated will provide 57,075 man-months of immediate direct employment.

The allotments, the longest single list of non-Federal projects yet approved, included funds for construction of bridges, sewers, waterworks, hospitals, street lights, schools, roads, municipal buildings, heating and power plants, a bakery, a library, parks, airport repairs and an incinerator.

The allotments included:
Indiana: Terre Haute, loan and Grant, additional street lights, $60,000.
Illinois: East Moline, grant, bakery building, $81,000; Elgin, grant, additional facilities for hospital, $22,500; Wilmington, grant, boiler house and heating system, $10,000;
St. Charles, grant, boiler installation, $7,700.

Wisconsin: Hillsboro, grant, waterworks, $1,500.

To Bar Outsiders
From Legion's Fun

Chicago, Oct. 4.—(AP)—The American Legion decided today too many non-members were participating in their national convention—fun-making.

A force of 200 Legionnaires was called to gather tonight and patrol the downtown district in groups of four to see that the Legion convention is for the Legion.

John Eldon, National Commander of the Forty and Eight Division of the Legion was placed in command.

"Last night we brought in 141 men for acting in ways that reflected on the good name of the Legion," he reported. "One of the 141 was a Legionnaire."

Uses for Bread Fruit Tree
The bread fruit tree of the tropical islands in the Pacific ocean is a tree of many uses. Its fruit, which is globular and about the size of a melon, is used as a vegetable and also, with different seasonings, as a dessert. Flour made from dried slices of this fruit is sometimes made into bread. The fibrous inner bark of the bread fruit tree is used in the manufacture of cloth. The wood is used for canoes and furniture, and the milky juice which exudes from the stem is the basis of a glue and a calking material.

FIRE BELIEVED
OF INCENDIARY

blaze cut them down.
Always they were side by side,
these pairs, when the end came.
And always their backs were arched with heads up-thrown and eye sockets staring grotesquely at the canyon's rim.

While a crew of men stood on high ground, arguing against the foreman's command that they rush to a lower level to aid a squad fighting flames, the fire at the lower point spurted into a sudden new fury and engulfed a dozen workers.

This story was told by Michael Fernandez.

Survivor's Story
"Our foreman ordered us to go to the lower level," he said. Someone shouted "no." While we were arguing a sheet of flames leaped up and covered the lower crew. A few seconds later the flames receded. The whole party below was dead."

In another section H. N. Claypool, a foreman, had a second to make a decision. He made it—and saved the lives of a score of men.

"I started to take my men into the path of the blaze to clear a break," Claypool said. "Something told me to hesitate. I gave the order to halt. In an instant a whirlpool of flame whipped across the spot where we would have been had we gone ahead. Eight men in a squad just beyond us were trapped.
It was all over in an instant."

Under RFC Program
The men were pick and shovel workers, recruited from all walks of life in the Reconstruction Finance Corporation—Los Angeles County men to combat unemployment with park work. They were working on the roads of the park, largest in the Los Angeles recreational system, when they were ordered into the ravine and told to beat the fire out with the shovels and cut a fire break.

Mayor Frank L. Sha ordered a thorough investigation of the circumstances which caused so great a toll to be taken. He said if carelessness or negligence are found to be the blame the city will cooperate with the county in fixing the responsibility. He promised also that the city will provide relief for the families of the victims.

Workmen Insured
The workmen were insured by the city under the state compensation act.

The fire swept over 1,000 acres of uninhabited land thickly studded with brush before it was controlled by hundreds of firemen and some 3,000 drafted workers. The scene was about 10 miles from downtown Los Angeles.

It spread rapidly with the aid of the customary afternoon wind from the ocean and a temperature of 91 degrees, the hottest October day in Los Angeles in nearly half a century.

ters. There have been no transi-

The decrease in transients in ordinance which provides that this class of men may be tried by the city.

BROTHERS ARRESTED

Dan and Larry Timmons, brothers, were arrested this morning at 8:30 by Patrolman John Bohnstiel in front of the Welfare headquarters on Hennepin avenue where they were reported to be creating a disturbance. Both were taken to the city jail and locked up, pending the filing of charges this afternoon.

Dan Tilton and Charles Ackers-son of Rochelle were arrested yesterday afternoon by the police on Hennepin avenue near Commercial alley and when arraigned before Justice Grover Gehant in police court, were assessed fines of $3 and costs each on intoxication charges which were paid.

20 Million Transactions
This is the 10th National Ward Week. It marks the coming again of Ward's twice a year demonstration of ability to lead in value-giving. It is an event of astounding proportions.
Attending this sale will be more people than the entire populations of New York and Chicago combined. There will take place over 20,000,000 transactions in which mountains of merchandise change hands.

But this is only half the story. To secure the special offerings now here for Ward Week, Montgomery Ward & Co. must plan a year ahead. Their army of buyers is in touch with more than 15,000 possible sources of supply. Their purchases for this 10th Ward Week total hundreds of carloads of feature bargains alone—new goods never shown before, and to be sold far under general prices. Furthermore, there are many, many additional carloads of regular merchandise to be sold at money-saving prices. 11

Shot At Bombers
About five minutes later another bomb was tossed at the home of Hugh McDole, a United Mine Worker employed at Peabody mine 43 here. McDole, awakened by the first explosion, was up when the bomb was tossed at his home and fired several shots at the automobile from which it was thrown. He said he did not know whether he hit anyone.

In Galatia Charles Gregory, a Progressive miner was wounded in the right leg by shots fired from a speeding automobile into the gasoline filling station where he was talking with four other men including a minister. The others escaped injury.

Three other bombings were reported during the night including one at Liberty, southwest of here.
Residents in the vicinity of Peabody mine 43, one the outskirts of Harrisburg said they heard shooting throughout the night but no other persons were reported wounded.

To Protect Citizens
Authorities said an investigation would be started immediately and steps taken to protect the lives of citizens.

Despite an announcement last night at a Progressive mass meeting here that all mines in the county refusing to permit PMA members to go back to their old jobs would be picketed, authorities said no pickets appeared at the shafts.

Some coal operators in the county this week turned a deaf ear to Progressives seeking to regain their jobs under the clause in the coal code stating that a miner has the right to choose his own organization. The operators said the terms of the code cannot be applied to the conditions created when miners deserted their parent union.

Delicious Recipes By Dixon Women

Following are some good recipes by Dixon women:

Luncheon Noodles
Two packages small noodles. Boil in salted water, then pour cold water on. Add one pint cream sauce with three-fourths of a pound of cheese ground and put in cream sauce, one can pimientos, cut fine, one small can mushrooms. Cook one pound fresh pork which has been cut in small pieces. Fry brown. Then add to above mixture. Serve with browned bread crumbs.—Mrs. Fred Rising of Los Angeles, Cal., formerly of Dixon.

Baked Tomato Pork Chops
Select as many chops as desired and salt, pepper and flour them. Place in a buttered casserole. Slice onions, green peppers and lemon on top of pork chops, and if another layer is desired, proceed as above. Now pour a large can of tomatoes over the chops. Bake in a moderate oven (350 degrees F.) for about an hour and a quarter.—Mrs. W. J. Niebergall.

Uncooked Fruit Cake
1 package dates
30 marshmallows
20 graham crackers
1 cup of nuts
3-4 cup of cream
Mix well and form in a roll. Let stand in icebox over night. Slice and serve with whipped cream.—Mrs. Conrad Dyke.

Cheese Balls
1 1-2 cups grated mild cheese
1 tablespoon flour
1-4 teaspoon salt
1-4 teaspoon salt
Cayenne pepper
2 egg yolks
2 egg whites
Mix cheese, flour, and seasoning and add to stiffly beaten whites of eggs. Shape into balls, dip in cracker crumbs and fry in deep fat. Serve at once with salad. This makes twenty balls.—Mrs. Robert E. Shaw.

Custard Pies May Be Varied
Custard pies may be made with plain pastry and varied by lining the pastry before the custard is poured into it, with chopped, cooked, dried apricots, mashed bananas, or ripe peaches pressed through a colander.

Apple pie rivals chocolate pie for popularity. If you're taking advantage of the apple season vary the pastry by giving it a cheese flavor.

Very delicious. Here's how:
Cream Cheese Pastry
2-3 cups cream cheese (1-2 pound)
1-2 teaspoon salt
1-2 cup shortening
2 cups pastry flour
Sift the flour and salt together. Cut into it the shortening and cream cheese. Chill one hour before using.—Mrs. E. T. Schuler, Gadsden, Ala., formerly of Dixon.

Spanish Pie
Two slices bacon
3-4 pound round steak, ground
1-2 green pepper
1-2 teaspoon salt
1 small onion
1 tablespoon pimiento
1 package fine noodles
1 can tomato sauce
1-4 pound of cheese
Fry bacon. Use grease to fry pepper, onion, round steak and salt. Boil noodles in salted water. Put all together in greased baking dish. Bake 45 minutes at temperature of 400 degrees. Keen covered.—Mrs. Fred Rising, Los Angeles, Cal., formerly of Dixon.

Hart, gave a short and appropriate address of welcome, Mrs. Wilson Dysart, accompanied by her sister, Mrs. Lloyd Davies at the piano, sang charmingly, "Don't Come In Sir Please," by Cyril Scott, and "Song of the Little Shepherd," by Winter Watt, responding to an encore with "Little Shoes," by Kathleen Manning.

LEN SMALL CATCHES UP WITH ONE STORY.

The Chicago Times has declared false a story it printed about former Governor Small in the last gubernatorial campaign. It says the article was based upon "statements issued in printed form by the state committee of the democratic party of Illinois."

Len Small brought a suit against the Times for damages, alleging libelous statements. This caused the Times to institute an investigation as to the truth or falsity of the matter it published. In its retraction it says:

"The democratic state committee has been called upon and has been unable to offer any proof that the statements made in the democratic campaign text-book were true. The Daily Times has investigated the facts and pronounces the statements made in the democratic text-book to be untrue, unjust and unfair to Len Small."

The Times then follows with the items it found and now declares to be untrue: That Len Small had removed from the executive mansion silverware and other furnishings worth $25,000, presented to the state by Governor Lowden; that an additional amount worth $25,000, paid for by taxpayers had been removed; that Governor Emmerson and his wife were not allowed by Mr. Small to look inside the mansion until after Emmerson had been installed as governor "and when he and his wife finally affected entrance, they found it an empty shell"; that the Emmersons had found just enough silverware to serve a dozen persons and that the table linen was missing; that Small had left the governorship with his pockets full and had dispatched three truckloads of furnishings from the executive mansion to Kankakee; that during his regime as governor, Small drew from the state treasury the entire monthly payroll for the servants in the executive mansion, settled with the servants himself and that there was no record to show how much each received.

It has taken Len Small a year to catch up with that choice lot of campaign stories, but he seems to have done it.

Len Small was pursued so viciously, so continuously, and with such determination during his period in the governorship and the scandals laid at his door by his pursuers were so numerous that the time came when a large group of people would believe anything that was said of him, particularly if it were printed.

Who concocted the stories above itemized is not disclosed by the Times. It dumps them on to the democratic state committee and leaves them. Of course a newspaper that has been so victimized, especially when acting in good faith in belief it is dealing with responsible persons, is not in the best of humor when it finds its backing vanishing into thin air.

Governor Small knows the ways of politics and heretofore has paid small attention to things said about him. If an officeholder of the fighting variety were to undertake to catch up with all the lies told about him, he would have little time to give to his office. Out of office, in retirement at his home in Kankakee, however, the former governor has had time to take up unfinished business of this kind.

It is a peculiar coincidence that two columns over from the public statement of the Chicago Times as published in the Kankakee Republican-News, which is edited by Leslie C. Small, is printed a statement that the Kankakee newspaper had been imposed upon when it was induced to publish a statement that Sally Rand would appear at a local theater on a certain night. Sally Rand's manager wrote that some fan dancer might appear, but it would not be Sally.

Newspapers have to rely upon various sources for news. They use the best means at their command to keep from being imposed upon by persons seeking personal profits and by persons seeking revenge or campaign advantages. The Kankakee newspaper was victimized in one way and the Chicago Times in another.—Moline Daily Dispatch.

OUTLAWS DEBUNKED.

Much as a romantically minded person might like to take these bold, bad gun men of the modern underworld at their own, it doesn't seem quite possible.

There are, for example, those two desperadoes, Harvey Bailey and Machine Gun Kelly.

Both of them were famed as walking arsenals, tough man-killers who trod the earth with such a mighty tread that all peace officers ran to cover before them. But each one, somehow, was captured without a shot being fired. The officers walked in on them, got the drop on them, and they surrendered as meekly as drug store cowboys.

And this is a bit damaging to the legend. The real bad men of the old west weren't taken that easily. They might be surrounded and covered, but they fought to the end. These modern bad men, apparently, only shoot when the cards are stacked in their favor. Billy the Kid or Deadwood Dick wouldn't have been caught in the same jail with them.

Anyone with as much sense as two gray geese knows that throughout the length and breadth of this land there can be no more delicious dish served up at a Thanksgiving or a Christmas dinner than a roast suckling pig.—Former U. S. Senator Atlee Pomerene.

(READ THE STORY, THEN COLOR THE PICTURE)

The wind kept blowing. Doty cried. "Gee, several times that the parrot, in the meantime, found that if he stayed close to the swimming hound. The wind, however, is too strong."

"It blows the bird right back toward the shore. Oh, look! He is trying it once more. If once he gets hold of the dog, the rescue won't take long."

Then Duncy said, "I will be amazed if by the bird the hound is raised. Why, say, this dog weighs plenty, and the parrot is rather small."

"I think we had better look around for some new way to save the hound. Just standing here and watching isn't going to help at all."

"All right, I will try my vine again," cried Scouty. "I am good, now and then, at lassooing. This vine is strong. In fact, it is like a rope."

The breeze, however, caught the vine and always threw it out of line. Wee Scouty tried it several times and then he gave up hope.

"The parrot, in the meantime, found that if he stayed close to the ground, he made much better headway. 'Watch me, now,' he loudly cried. And then, away down low he flew. The next thing that the Times knew, the bird was yelling loudly, 'Look! I have reached the poor hound's side.'"

Wee Goldy shouted, "What a sight! That parrot surely is all right. He has the collar of the dog clutched in his bill."

"And now they are rising in the air. Oh, gee, I wish I was out there to help the parrot with his task. This really is a thrill!"

The Times stood and looked in awe. "Why, such a thing I never saw," said Windy. "How that bird can lift the dog I cannot see." The bunch then raised a merry roar just as the parrot reached the shore. Wee Duncy grabbed the hound and cried, "Don't fret, now. You are all right."

(The Times build a raft in the next story.)

WHERE DO YOU LIVE?

By Dr. Joseph Fort Newton

There are two ways of living, two levels of life leading to a third if we do not stop. A man either thinks as he lives or he lives as he thinks. In other words, he lives by instinct or by insight; by impulse or by obligation, by desire or by duty.

On the lower level, if a man is strong enough to take a business away from another man, he takes it. If a woman wants a man who is married to someone else she gets him if she can. It is the law of the jungle, where the weak go down and the swiftest win the race.

But, if a man has insight, he sees that selfishness is short-sighted and defeats itself. There is "a stop in the mind," as an old Quaker saint put it; something which restrains, an urge to otherness, a moral sense of right and wrong. It may be only a family tradition, or a caste code, but it has some regard for others and the good of all.

By the same token, on this level a woman will not break up a home to gratify her power of passion, since it would be striking at the security of every home. Also, a man will do as the old farmer did in Kansas in the year of the drought. His cribs were full of bursting with corn and his neighbors had none, but he did not raise the price a penny.

But there is a third floor in the house of life. We must climb up to it; there is no elevator. There we enter into a clearer, purer air, which enables us to see deeper into ourselves and find the truth. A woman in this room, instead of wrecking another home, will face her own soul, and get clear of the desire to do such any injury.

On this level of gracious living a man will not use men merely to make money—he will use money to make men. He sees that love is the law of life, whereby instinct is harnessed to the highest ends, and an finds freedom and fulfillment in a fellowship of service.

Where do you live? Down stairs or upstairs? In the basement of instinct, groping in the dark, or on the third floor where, even at night, we can see the great stars obeying the holy will of God?

FERRETS AND INFLUENZA

The value of the discovery that ferrets can develop influenza lies in the fact that science thus is provided with a laboratory animal susceptible to the disease and therefore one in which it can be studied at will.

Man gains much knowledge about disease processes by watching nature and by imitating her. In the laboratory the accidents of disease are imitated with deliberateness and under controlled circumstances.

In this fashion we can learn what causes a given disease, how it spreads, what are the stages of its development and other characteristics. These facts, not infrequently enable us to attack the disease at its weakest point, to render it less destructive and to treat it effectively.

In the instance of influenza, hitherto we have lacked such a laboratory animal. Most animals appear to be resistant to influenza. And so, in seeking the cause of influenza, scientists have utilized human volunteers, many of whom are recruited from the personnel of the experimental laboratories.

But there are evident drawbacks to the use of humans as experimental animals for influenza. Not the least of these is the fact that influenza is always a dangerous disease. Furthermore, the human animal is too complicated; too many unknown and indeterminate factors enter into his reactions.

And yet there are problems to be solved in influenza. What causes it? What is the relationship of the influenza germ to the influenza? What is the relationship of influenza to the common cold?

Is influenza caused by a filterable virus, a living organism too small to be seen under our best microscopes, and so infinitesimal that it will pass through the pores of unglazed porcelain?

These and similar questions we hope to be able to study and to determine in the ferret, a laboratory animal which is neither costly to buy nor to maintain.

Murderers Found Drunk In Cell In State Penitentiary

Joliet, Ill., Oct. 3.—(AP)—Four Chicago murderers were found in a penitentiary cell last night, apparently enjoying a convivial party.

Nathan Leopold, Jr., and Richard Loeb, the boy murderers of Bobby Franks, were two of the visitors. Their excuses for paying a call were not so lame as the others and prison physicians said they were not drunk, so the Warden just sent them back to their own quarters.

Robert Scott, 31, a life termer, and George Sullivan, 53, in for 14 years, were intoxicated and were ordered into solitary confinement. No liquor was found in the cell.

Leopold and Loeb excused themselves with the explanations that they were delivering papers in the penitentiary correspondence school.

MAROONS HOPING FOR BETTER YEAR ON THE GRIDIRON

First Game On Saturday With Cornell Attracts Interest

Chicago, Oct. 4—(AP)—Although it was not bearing on the Western Conference championship, the Chicago College game Saturday at Stagg Field is attracting considerable interest.

It will mark an important point in Maroon football history. It serves to introduce Coach Clark Shaughnessy to the Big Ten and makes the first time in 42 years that Amos Alonzo Stagg is not at the helm.

There is real enthusiasm on the Maroon campus over the 23rd prospects this year. They don't expect a championship, but predict a good season.

Much of Shaughnessy's hope depends on sophomores as six of the first string team are second year men. There will be four in the line and two in the backfield.

Cornell has a fast charging, but light line. DeLoos Osburn, a guard, is the outstanding man on the team.

Around the Big Ten

Indiana worked on Minnesota formations... Dick Zoll replaced Renegar at tackle on Indiana's line... Duane Purvis will do most of Purdue's punting... Thoroughly chastened for losing, Pay and Austin were back on Michigan's line yesterday... Dick Heekin, sophomore back at Ohio State, is very likely to start against Virginia Saturday... Wisconsin looked good in scrimmaging against the freshmen... So did Illinois... Coach Ossie Solem put Iowa's squad through a signal drill... Minnesota drilled on pass defense... The Maroons had dummy scrimmage... Northwestern will play the Wildcat freshmen Saturday.

Columbus Winner Of Little Series

Buffalo, N. Y., Oct. 4—(AP)—The little world series championship was in the hands of the Columbus Red Birds of the American Association today as the result of their five out of eight games victory over the Buffalo Bisons of the International League.

The Birds clinched their drive to the title last night with a 10-2 victory in a game featured by the brilliant pitching of their tall right hander, Jim Winford. Winford allowed only five hits and struck out 11 Bisons.

The Bisons qualified for the series by defeating Baltimore and Rochester in the playoffs of their league after barely squeaking into the fourth qualifying position.

GIANT KILLER

The little giant of Ohio football is George Gauthier, above, whose Ohio Wesleyan Bishops of Delaware have made things tough for Syracuse for the last five years. Last year's Wesleyan 19-12 victory was Gauthier's second victory to Syracuse's one in a series of five games, two being tied. On Oct. 14 George's squad plays Syracuse again.

SENATORS GIVE HUBBELL CREDIT; EXPECT TO WIN

Are Confident They Will "Take" Rest Of Terry's Pitchers

By ALAN GOULD (Associated Press Sports Writer)

New York, Oct. 4—(AP)—Carl Owen Hubbell today was no less the topic of the most feverish world series debate than he was before he stepped out and checked the Senators in the opening game before an unexpectedly big crowd of nearly 47,000 cash customers in the Polo Grounds.

Even the most rabid Washington rooters admitted Hubbell's greatness under fire, his courage and control in a closing series of difficult situations. Where American Leaguers cling to the hope, if not the conviction that the "Giants" southpaw may be less baffling on his next appearance, the National League forces now look for the lean left-hander to be the deciding factor and more effective as the battle develops.

"The answer is that they came up and looked Hubbell in the eye in the stretch—otherwise the eighth and ninth innings—and they couldn't pass him," gleamed Bill Terry, black-haired manager of the Giants. "The only thing wrong with Hubbell when he lost control in the eighth, was that he was not 'following through' momentarily."

Two grayheads of baseball, John Honus Wagner and John Joseph McGraw, brought together memories of the rare old days as they put their arms around each other's shoulders in the corner of a room filled with Giant enthusiasts. To McGraw, Wagner still is the greatest all-around ball player of all time. To John Honus, McGraw is still the shrewdest manager of them all. They were unanimous too, that Hubbell is the best pitcher to carry the National League banner into the world series since Christy Mathewson was in his prime.

The Senators came so close to snatching victory, in spite of Hubbell, that they have lost little of their confidence in "taking" the Giants.

"Hubbell's great but we will take the rest of the Giant staff and take him the next time," volunteered one of the Washington scouts. "You can't stop a team of hitters like our club very long. They simply could not produce the hits in the pinches yesterday. Why look at that ninth—three on, none out, and nobody could get the ball out of the infield? We give no credit to Hubbell but it won't happen again!"

Cubs Favored To Win City Series

Chicago, Oct. 4—(AP)—The White Sox and Cubs renew their municipal baseball feud today in the first game of the city series at Wrigley Field.

Like the world series, the city title will be awarded on a basis of four victories. It is the 20th series between the north and south-siders, the Sox having won 12 of the previous meetings. One ended in a tie.

Stribling Rites Set For Tomorrow

An inquest will be held Friday in an effort to fix blame for the accident.

BEGIN HERE TODAY

BOB WESTON, son of a millionaire, and JOAN WARREN, a Memphis girl, are attracted to each other on the train, en route to Memphis. Joan has left college before graduation to assist her family in a financial emergency. Bob is coming to Memphis in connection with the construction of a southern branch of his father's mills.

Bob speaks to Joan but, thinking he is starting a flirtation, she rebuffs him. He loses sight of her at the station but tells a friend, DUKE TURNER, that he is determined to find her.

Joan's father, dead, was a member of an aristocratic family and Mrs. WARREN longs for her daughter to enjoy the social position rightfully theirs. PAT, who is 18 and has a job as a typist, loves pleasure and pretty clothes and plans to escape the privations and monotony of her mother's life through a rich marriage.

Joan sees Bob in a tea room but he does not see her. Through MOLLY DAVIS, a society girl, Joan sings at a Junior League benefit entertainment which Bob attends. After the program he is waiting for Joan when his path is barred by BARBARA COURTNEY, whom he had known in New York. Because of this brief encounter he loses Joan again.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY CHAPTER IV

THE hotel lobby was filled with people when Bob reached it, but the girl he sought was not there. She was not in front of the hotel or at the side entrance, search revealed. He felt sick with disappointment.

But, he told himself, she would not be hard to find now. She had a glorious voice. She sang at entertainments. And her name was Joan Warren. Well, the night had yielded something.

Barbara Courtney was waiting when he returned. "Don't bother to explain, Bob," she said. "I suppose you had a telegram to send or somebody called you to the phone or your bootlegger was waiting."

"Three bad guesses. Shall I explain?"

"Don't bother. I'm so terribly glad to see you it doesn't matter."

That was one of the nice things about Barbara. She never made things difficult.

"But I am hurt because you didn't call me when you first got here! I called and called and couldn't get you," she went on. "I planned to call you soon. I've been busy working on plans for the textile plant."

"But you'll play around some, Bob. What about tomorrow night? Some of us are going to the club for dinner and then to the Silver Slipper later."

He hesitated. "I'm really frightfully busy. I've a bunch of blueprints to check tomorrow."

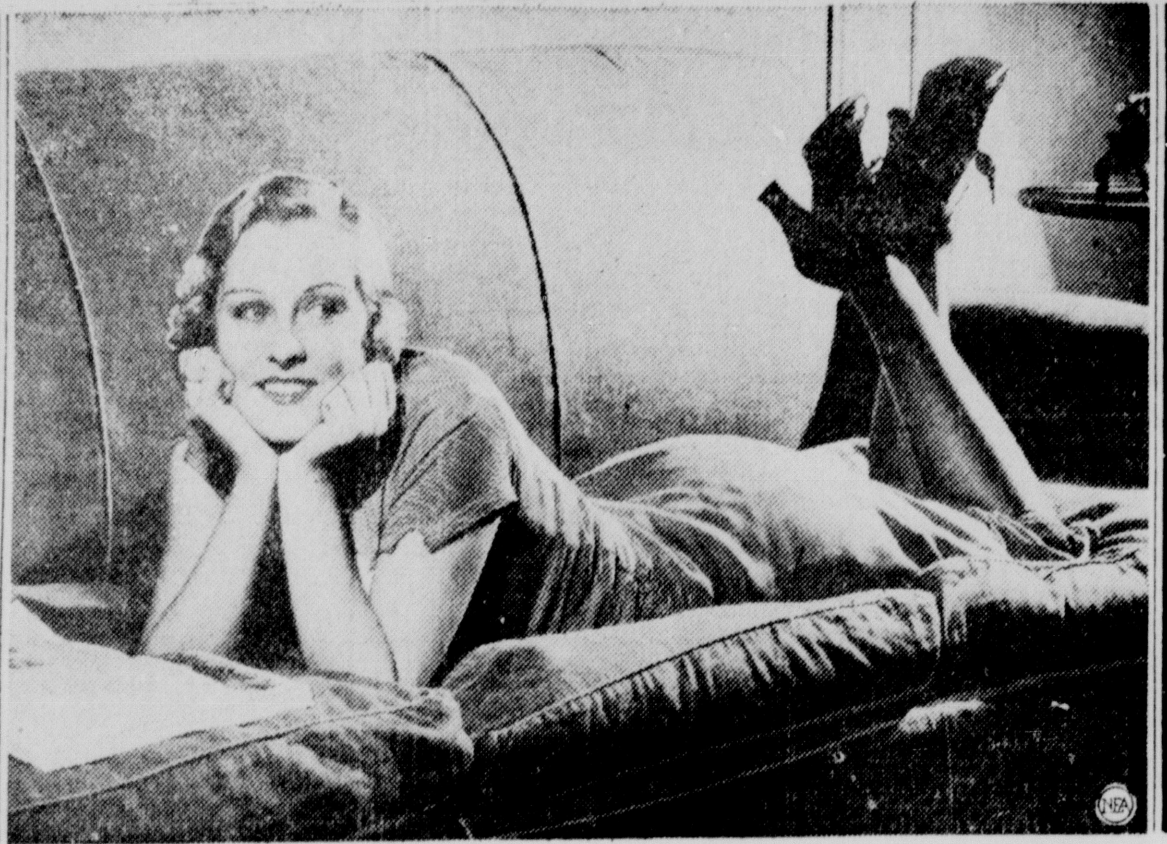

"Please, Bob! It's going to be an awfully nice party."

"All right then. I really wanted to."

"It's settled! And will you pick me up, Bob? I'm going to break a day for you."

It was hard to refuse Barbara. She was a nice girl and he'd rather liked her the summer they were on the same house party in Maine. His father had met her, too, when she came to New York and thought she was A-1.

WHEN Barbara had gone he went to his room and studied the list of Warrens in the telephone directory. Well, there was nothing else to do. He would go through the list systematically. Half way through, some time later, he thought he detected an amused note in the operator's voice. He crimsoned, but went doggedly on. Some of the Warrens were out. He made pencil notations of these.

"You seem thrilled, all right!" retorted Pat.

"May I speak to Joan, please?" About the twelfth time he asked that a voice said pleasantly, "Just a moment."

A man's voice answered. Someone thought he wanted to speak to "Joe." Bob's spirits slumped again.

At the end of a weary round of phone calls, confidence was leaving him. Illogically, he was angry with Barbara Courtney. If Barbara hadn't stopped him, he would have reached Joan before she stepped in the elevator. If she had not stopped him, he would be with Joan now—driving maybe, or watching a picture show, or perhaps they'd be in the living room of her home with an open fire and the lights turned low.

His blueprints were in a case. The small trunk filled with his favorite books—books which had supplied all his need for entertainment during six months in the Azores—was waiting to be unpacked. But he began undressing. He was tired. The night was flat.

He would find Joan if he had to employ every detective in Memphis to do it.

"I'm getting off my head," he thought. "I'm going to bed and sleep of this sentimental spree."

But the romantic hangover was just as bad.

JOAN was having her blue moments too. She was punishing herself with the thought that she would never see him again. If she had only waited a moment longer he would probably have joined them. But she had looked back and a girl was talking with him. So she had rushed away with Pat as though she wanted to get away from him. What was the matter with girls that they acted like that?

"I'll never see him again," she thought. "Opportunities don't keep coming to people."

The mood persisted and Joan in such a mood was as nice to have about as an ice pack on a cold, damp day, according to Pat. It was three days later. Pat had received a $5 a month raise and her elation was somewhat dampened by Joan's lack of enthusiasm.

"Of course I'm glad, darling," Joan said. "I think it's wonderful."

"You seem thrilled all right!" retorted Pat. She was lying on the davenport and reached for the magazine she had discarded. "Anyhow," she went on, "it's unusual in these times to get any kind of raise. Jerry said so."

"Jerry?" queried her mother. "His family own the business."

"Don't say 'well,'" reproved her mother. "It doesn't sound nice. How long have you known the young man?"

"Oh, several weeks," Pat said carelessly.

The doorbell rang a few minutes later and Pat flew to it. She came back with color high in her cheeks.

"Joan, lend me your rouge and lipstick. Hurry! I can't find mine."

"What are you organizing for?" Bill, who had just entered the room, asked.

"I'm going to a fire, darling," Pat answered impudently. "Look out of the window and you'll see the little red wagon."

Bill went to the window and looked out. A long, low black car with nickel trimmings was drawn up at the curb, looking, somehow, out of place on the street.

"The rich have descended upon us," Bill began.

"Oh, be as simple as you like, Bill," Pat said airily. Her eyes were shining. She was applying lipstick and rouge, pinching her eyelashes upward to make them curl, going through motions with which the family was familiar.

"If you're interested I'll tell you that I'm having dinner downtown with Jerome Forrester," Pat said. "He's rich and attractive. Incidentally his falling is blonds—like me. I've had lunch with him twice and there's no reason why I can't go to dinner with him."

"Well, you can't," Bill said. "Pat—her mother began."

"Can't I?" said Pat rebelliously. "Now, Mother, don't be 90! That old stuff went out with hair nets."

She was off in a sudden whirl. "My blue heret—oh, Mother, where did you put it? Don't wait up for me, Joan. Put a key in the mail box."

Joan saw Pat wave a careless hand to a young man coming up the walk. But it was a full moment before she recognized the young man as Dick Thornton. And even more difficult a few moments later, listening to his deep, assured voice. Yes, mother was right. Dick had changed. He was a man now, fine and dependable. Any girl should be proud to possess his affections.

What was the matter with her that Dick's obvious devotion should leave her cold? While he talked of plans for the future—hinting somehow that Joan was bound up in them—her thoughts were far away. Thinking of a train trip, thinking of last night, wondering, hoping. Dick didn't notice Joan's abstraction. He thought she was a perfect audience, exactly the sort of girl a successful physician should have for a wife.

JOAN had been in bed more than an hour when she heard a car stop in front of the house. That meant Pat was home.

But the minutes dragged and Pat failed to appear. Finally Joan went into the hall. The light downstairs had been left burning and from where she stood she could see the two below clearly.

Pat's laughing face in its frame of golden hair was lifted to meet the gaze of the young man.

Suddenly Joan saw the man's arm go around Pat, pulling her close, and they kissed.

Joan flew to her room, her face burning. Pat kissing a man who was little more than a stranger! It was cheap!

"I'll have to talk to Pat," she thought miserably.

Pat came up the stairs, humming gaily. "Oh, you're awake, Joan," she said, staring resentfully at the slim figure sitting upright in bed.

"I was worried, Pat," I won't have you sitting up worrying about me. I've gotten along three years without you and I won't have you telling me what to do now."

"Pat, let's not quarrel," she said. "Well, then, get this straight. I've had a wonderful time tonight and I'm going to have more of it!"

Joan thought honestly.

BEGIN HERE TODAY

BOB WESTON, son of a millionaire, comes to Memphis when his father is building a new textile plant. Bob tries to find a pretty girl he saw on the train and later heard sing at a Junior League benefit. The girl is JOAN WARREN, member of an impoverished family with an aristocratic background. Joan's mother longs for her daughter to have the social position rightfully theirs.

Joan has left college before graduation to assist the family in a financial emergency. PAT, her 18-year-old sister, has a job as typist. Pat loves pleasure and pretty clothes and plans to escape privations and monotony through a rich marriage.

Pat meets JERRY FORRESTER, son of her employer. She has a date with him and it is late when they return. Joan, waiting up for Pat, sees Jerry kiss her. Joan remonstrates with Pat, who resents this interference. "I've had a good time and I mean to have more of them," Pat says.

BARBARA COURTNEY, whom Bob had known in New York, invites him to dinner at her home.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY CHAPTER V

PAT was living in a whirl of gaiety these days, going some where with Jerry Forrester almost every night. But for Joan the time passed uneventfully. The care-free life at Holbrook Hall was fast becoming a distant memory. Nowadays she spent her time trying to lessen the housekeeping burden for her mother, fixing dainty trays to tempt Benny's flagging appetite, reading aloud to him, taking him for spins on bright days.

Benny selected the drives and once they drove past the big, stone house where Jerry Forrester lived. "Pretty soft for Pat's fellow," Benny had said, staring at the ornate home. Even Benny was impressed!

Joan thought, there was something pathetic about her mother's eagerness to believe Jerry's interest in her younger daughter was genuine. Mother could remember days in the 90's when Forrester's was just a tiny place and Mrs. Forrester was the only clerk. But money made such a difference with Mother. Perhaps it was because life had been terribly hard for her.

Then there was Bill, saying jovially when the nightly telephone call brought Pat flying, "Now talk your hour!"

What was the matter with Bill and Mother and even Benny?

Joan felt a little sick but tried to hide her feelings and her dislike of the man she had dubbed privately "spoiled playboy."

She passed him on Union avenue one afternoon so engrossed in the flashy dressed girl with him that he failed to see her. Joan did not tell Pat about this. Pat was so gay and happy. Joan hadn't the heart to dim that radiance.

PERHAPS Jerry Forrester really was more decent than she believed. He might be merely sophisticated and not a philanderer, after all.

"I've said less than half a dozen words to him at any time," Joan thought honestly.

"I'm afraid we misjudged that young man," Mrs. Warren said one day. "He seems very nice Suddenly Bob leaned forward, placing a hand under her chin, tipping it up.

and he's evidently in love with Pat. He must be to spend all his time with her!"

She waited a moment. Then, as Joan did not reply, she continued. "Perhaps he isn't the type we would have selected for Pat. But she likes pretty things and comforts and it would be nice for her to marry a rich man."

"I hate rich men," Joan flared out suddenly. "Nearly always they're spoiled. You know, Mother, men who have to work for what they get are finer and more dependable. I'd rather marry a poor man."

"I always thought you and Dick would marry some day," said her mother.

"Silly!" Joan said, smiling. "No, you didn't. Mother. You merely hope we will." She added after a moment, "Dick's a dear and life with him would always be comfortable and easy. But I don't know that I want an easy, comfortable life."

She answered her mother's amazed look. "I mean, Mother, I want something more than that. I want to go adventuring with my husband."

"Joan!" Joan laughed. Mother would never understand!

"I thought you despised adventures, dear."

"Some of them," Joan said. Nevertheless she was lonely. And when Dick called that night she accepted his invitation to dinner almost eagerly. It wasn't bad to have someone to go about with who was as nice as Dick and as devoted. It would be safe to marry Dick.

They saw Jean Harlow in her latest picture and then drove by the Green Grill for sandwiches. It was almost one o'clock when they returned. Joan told Dick goodnight at the door and prepared to turn the key.

"Pat's not in, honey!" her mother called softly from the head of the stairs.

"Go back to bed, Mother," Joan said. "I'll be awake until she comes."

AT two o'clock Pat came. Up the stairs and into the room with a little rush. She hung off her coat quickly and stood for a moment, staring at her sister. Joan thought she had never seen Pat so lovely. She was wearing a cherry-colored chiffon. Her eyes were like twin stars and her cheeks were flushed.

She came toward the bed, holding out her arm.

"Joan, look at this perfectly darling wrist watch Jerry gave me. Platinum and diamonds! I wonder how he knew I was having a birthday tomorrow."

Joan took the soft, slim hand in hers. "It's beautiful, Pat. Do you think you should keep it?"

"Imagine giving it up!" Pat said, happily. "I'd like to see anybody make me!"

She sat down on the bed, "Oh, Joan, I've had a marvelous time. Met a lot of Jerry's friends. They were all nice to me, but there was a married woman, Claire Williams—I simply hated her! Jerry said he didn't care for her either, but he's known her a long time so he had to dance with her. There's a woman, Joan, would give me trouble, if she could!"

"Pat, dear, what do you care? You really don't know a thing about Jerry."

"I know he's crazy about me. Simply crazy about me."

Joan couldn't wet-blanket such a mood. Maybe Jerry was all right after all.

About eight o'clock the next night the doorbell rang.

"Jerry is early," Pat said. "Tell him I'll be right down, Joan."

But it was not Jerome Forrester who faced Joan in the doorway. The young man, hat in hand, smiled.

"Oh," said Joan, "it's you!" "Well, yes," said the young man. "It's a little early for ghosts to be up, isn't it? You're going to invite me in, I hope. You would if you knew what I've gone through finding you."

"But you did find me," Joan said, holding tight to the door, trying to hold on to sanity. It was madness, looking up into the face of a perfect stranger and feeling her heart pound wildly, the color rushing to her face.

"Please come in," She thought that she was acting like a school girl. He came in and stood looking down at her. "Get your hat and coat," he said, "and let's drive around. How's that?"

"Well," said Joan with a lump in her throat.

FIVE minutes later she was seated beside him in a low, gray roadster, and Bob Weston was piloting the car surely and swiftly along Central. Now and then she stole a look at him. Yes, he was just as she remembered him—the finely chiseled nose, firm mouth and slightly dominant chin. She tried to think of stabilizing and familiar things.

"Was mine the last doorbell?" she asked.

"The first?"

"The second. I ran out on a party with a girl I used to know—"

It was ridiculous to feel that twinge of jealousy.

He told her about Duke pronouncing her name so that it sounded like "Warren," and how he'd finally traced her address through Molly Davis.

Joan was happy again. He had been out with the other girl because he couldn't find her. He had searched for her!

"All I had to go on was your name," Bob said. "I heard your relatives call you Joan."

She gasped. "Anything wrong?"

"I was thinking that I don't know your name."

"It's Robert Weston. Does that help?"

She nodded. "Can you say Bob?"

"Yes." "Bob." "No." "It wasn't so hard, was it?"

Bob had been driving slowly. Now he brought the car to the side of the road and stopped it. Joan, her heart pounding, turned to meet his look—not the teasing expression she had expected but a steady, thoughtful look. She smiled a little, uncertainly. And suddenly Bob leaned forward, placing a hand under her chin, tipping it up.

LEGION TO GET DOWN TO TALKING BUSINESS TODAY

Convention Sessions Will Follow Colorful Parade

Chicago, Oct. 4.—(AP)—The American Legion turned its attention today to the serious business of formulating its policies on major questions, including rehabilitation and possibly a war against crime.

Its day of pageantry, parading and thundering salutes over, the delegates, representing some 753-310 Legionnaires, gave attention not only to these topics, but to such matters as Americanism, child welfare, national defense, the NRA, recognition of Russia, and the place for their next annual meeting.

Miami, Fla., was recommended by the Time and Place committee for the 1934 meeting, over Atlantic City and St. Louis.

There was also the possibility that the bonus question would come up, Congressman Wright Patman, Texas Democrat, having announced last night that he would offer his plan for payment of adjusted service certificates to the convention's legislative committee.

He said he was unable to forecast what the committee would think of his proposal, but asserted that there was an "overwhelming sentiment" among the convention's delegates for payment of the bonus in case there is an inflation of the currency.

Rehabilitation Policy
For its Rehabilitation policy the Legionnaires had for consideration a plan proposing all veterans needing hospitalization should receive it under government auspices, regardless of when their ailments began. If adopted, this would run counter to the policy of President Roosevelt as outlined in his address at the opening session, when he said ex-service men, who suffer from ailments contracted since the war and not as a result of their service, should turn to their local or state communities for relief before receiving it from the Federal government.

Would Authorize Suits
A sub-committee on insurance of the Legion's Rehabilitation committee, meeting last night after the rank and file had spent nine hours of parading down Michigan Boulevard, submitted a report holding that any veteran who filed his disability claim prior to July, 1931, should be permitted to file suit in United States courts to enforce the claim, regardless of the Federal Economy Act.

Meanwhile, the crowd—any estimate up to a million would do for its size—stood and cheered for the soldiers themselves, the drum and bugle corps and the colorful floats. It was a good natured throng that pushed and shoved for vantage points.

Notes of Sadness
Several notes of sadness added a touch of tragedy to the day's activities. One was in the death of Gust Dockkas, 45, Chicago, who collapsed, apparently a victim of a heart attack as he watched the parade.

John Payne, 4, was killed when he ran away from his parents, Mr. and Mrs. John Payne, La Grange, Ill., and ran into the path of a bus. At least four other persons were injured when they fell from points of vantage during the procession, and Otto Koglin, Chicago, was bitten by the bear of the California delegation when he offered it a peanut.

Johnson Calls For An End Of "Mob Conditions"
In Penna.

New York, Oct. 4.—(AP)—President Roosevelt put the spot of enforcement of his national recovery codes today with particular emphasis on peace between capital and labor.

Hugh S. Johnson, Industrial Administrator, sounded the call for orderly relations last night after a talk with the President when he called for an end of "mob conditions" in the bituminous fields.

Forgotten Sweetheart

MARY RAYMOND ©1933 NEA SERVICE, INC.

BEGIN HERE TODAY
BOB WESTON, son of a millionaire, comes to Memphis where his father is building a new textile plant. Bob tries to find a lovely girl he saw on the train and later heard sing at a Junior League benefit. The girl is JOAN WARING, member of an impoverished family with an aristocratic background. Joan's mother longs for her daughters to have the social position rightfully theirs. Joan has left college before graduation to assist the family in a financial emergency. PAT, her 18-year-old sister, has a job as typist. Pat loves pleasure and pretty clothes and hopes to escape drudgery through a rich marriage. Pat meets JERRY FORRESTER, son of her employer. Other members of the Waring family accept Jerry's attentions to Pat as an indication of serious interest. Joan, who believes Jerry is a spoiled playboy, is skeptical. Bob finally finds Joan. They go for a drive and Joan realizes she is falling in love with him. NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY

CHAPTER VI

BOB did not kiss Joan. He only said in a voice, stirred by emotion, "You're sweet, Joan!" Then he started the car rather abruptly and Joan relaxed against the seat, feeling shaken and happy. She was amazed at her mixed emotions. She had wanted him to kiss her and yet she was glad, terribly glad, that he hadn't. If he had she would have thought of Pat and Jerry. She was sorry for Pat—sorry for all girls who knew men like Jerry when there were men like Bob in the world.

"A penny for your thoughts, Joan."

"Not worth a penny." Her voice was not quite steady, but the tone seemed to satisfy him.

Bob answered quietly, "I'd risk a lot more to find out."

Something hung between them, some golden, glamorous cloud, enveloping them even through light and casual conversation.

Back at Joan's home her mother met them in the hall. Joan introduced Bob and he grasped the hand Mrs. Waring extended.

"It must be lonely for you, being a stranger here," she said.

"I'm feeling more at home all the time," he answered with a smile at Joan.

"You must have dinner with us some night. Could you come tomorrow?"

"I'll be delighted, Mrs. Waring."

Joan caught her breath. Mother coming out of her timid shell, inviting a stranger to dinner! Was the world coming to an end?

THE sun, pouring through the window panes, roused Joan next morning. She leaped out of bed and closed the windows, shutting out the fresh, cold February air.

She was suddenly nervous. Seventy-three and a million things to do. Pat had finished breakfast and was on her way down town. Joan slipped hurriedly into her clothes.

There were the tall crystal glasses to be washed and the best table napkins and damask cloth to be pressed. Bill must go for Stella who worked by the day and was always pressed into service on special occasions.

"I'll get some flowers down town," Joan planned. "We really can't afford them but I do want the table to look pretty."

about Pittsburgh.

In this instance Johnson sided with labor and told the operators of the "captive" mines operated by the steel and iron companies to quit "quibbling about small points."

Roosevelt talks tonight before the Conference of Catholic Charities here and there is every expectation that he will expound in detail his ideas on the troublesome labor issue in the recovery campaign as well as the credit expansion program to back it up.

He is permitting no interpretation of the clause in the National Industrial Recovery Act declaring the right of collective bargaining for labor. He is standing pat on the right of employees to deal with employers through their own representatives. The signing of 17 more codes for industry late yesterday by the President marked the transition of the recovery drive from the organization to the enforcement phase.

Requires Supervision
After a two-hour talk with Johnson he designated him to carry on and put into effective operation the new working agreements for industry and commerce which he feels require a government supervision in the maturing period.

Johnson told newspapermen he would divide the administrative machinery into four or six sections with an aide in charge of each.

with himself as coordinator to see that policies clicked.

He emphasized that he was principally interested just now in insuring sure of peaceful relations between labor and employers. He spoke of building up an organization for this purpose from the emergency mediation board now presided over by Senator Wagner, of New York.

Referring to the recurrence of strife in the western Pennsylvania bituminous fields, he declared "we can't continue to permit mob conditions around Pittsburgh and we are not going to permit it."

Agrees With Miners
He agreed with the position of the miners in the "captive" mines that the agreement with the operators allowing the same working conditions as prevailed in the mines organized by the United Mine Workers should permit the check-off system and the election by miners of check weighmen.

"Quibbling about such small points as that exhausts my patience," growled Johnson. "It is too fine a point for me. The operators signed the agreement to deal with the representatives of the employees. There it is and that is plain enough to me."

One more of the basic codes remains to be signed—that for the retail trades. Johnson said that was necessary for this agreement was a decision by himself on the clause to allow prices on the basis

Pat opened the door and then stood staring blankly.

Mother was rather helpless in the kitchen when it came to special events. Joan counted off the tasks that must be attended to.

"Roast to watch, cake to make, vegetables washed, mayonnaise—"

She enumerated them on slender fingers.

"Two hours coaching Paul and Marie Wilson. And if I have a minute I'll run over on Union for a shampoo. Perhaps I'll be really extravagant and have a manicure."

She tiptoed by Benny's door, suddenly contrite. Here she was, excited and happy when Benny was so ill. Was she really light and frivolous after all?

The morning did not go smoothly. To begin with, Stella sent word her husband was sick. She finally arrived and presently the fragrant aroma of one of the good cakes filled the air.

A little later Mrs. Waring came to the kitchen door with a distressed look on her face. She was holding out the snowy linen cloth that was her pride. A large hole—no, two large holes!—showed plainly.

"Mothers," she said tragically.

"Well, darn it," said Joan, adding quickly, "No, darling, I'm not using bad words. Can't you darn them?"

"It would take too long," said her mother. "And a mended cloth!"

"Never mind," said Joan, taking the cloth and spreading it out. "I'll wash and press a little linen centerpiece. This large hole is just about in the middle where the flowers will be and we can put a small celery tray over the other."

"We'll have two trays and we won't move the one over the hole. We'll manage."

"Well, all right," said her mother. Are you sure he's the kind that won't mind?"

"Of course!" said Joan. "He wouldn't notice anything like a table cloth."

The second mishap occurred a few minutes later. There was a crash, a terrible crash that sent Joan and her mother flying to the kitchen. Stella stood surveying a mass of shining glass.

"Stella!" gasped Joan.

"All the best glasses," mourned Stella. "Honest, Miss Joan, I don't know how I did it! I guess I was so worried and nervous about Jim."

"Never mind," said Mrs. Waring kindly. "Wash the old glasses in hot, soapy water and rinse them. Give them a good shine, too. Accidents will happen."

Joan fled to the living room. Why did Stella's husband have to be sick today of all days? Why did mother have to attack the best table cloth when there were plenty of old ones?

PAT had come in for lunch. "You look worried," she said.

"Everything's gone wrong," Joan told her. "Pat, before you go back down town could you run the car to the garage and have some gas put in? I have a million things to do this afternoon."

"Lots of trouble for a salesman—" Pat began.

"He's not a salesman. It's something to do with a mill," Joan said vaguely.

"Well, I don't know why things must be so fine for this mill man," Pat began. She went to the garage, brought the old car out, racing the engine.

"I believe I'll go with you," Joan called. "Maybe the ride will make me feel better."

Pat chatted amiably, Joan scarcely listening. She was thinking there would be a good time to stop at Tony's and get lettuce and celery.

"I saw that swanky Barbara Courtney downtown with the best looking man," Pat was saying.

"Who's she?" Joan asked absently.

Pat chuckled. "I wish she could have heard that! Imagine not knowing who Barbara Courtney is! She's the best dressed girl around these parts. Goes everywhere and always has a string of men along. Snooty. That's why I hate her. Girls like that burn me up!"

"Today she was walking on air, coming out of the Book Shelf and this good looking man was carrying some books. They got in his roadster and drove away."

Joan smiled. "I can't place her," she said, "but I seem to remember the name—Courtney."

"They haven't any money," Pat said, "but they think they're the last word. Some wealthy relatives educated Barbara in an exclusive school up north, took her abroad and then sent her back, hoping she'd marry a rich man. My, the airs that girl has! She can look right through anyone like us!"

But Joan had lost interest. "Drop me at Tony's," she was saying. "And pick me up on your way back."

She shopped capably. Tony delved deep into the lettuce heads piled on the rack. He selected one, shook a grizzled head and chose another.

"This bettah!" he said. "Nice avocado from Florida," he tempted. Joan recklessly purchased two.

Pat was back, honking the horn impatiently, and Joan, package laden, hurried outside.

"You act like we're millionaires," Pat said. "Heavens, you must have fallen hard!"

PAT was first dressed that evening.

She wore a brown crepe, cut gracefully. It was an inexpensive frock but becoming. Joan thought she had never seen Pat looking sweeter and nodded approval.

"Will I do?" Pat asked, pirouetting.

"You look lovely. Now run along and see if everything's running smoothly in the kitchen. I'll be down in five minutes."

But Stella had no use for Pat in the kitchen. She went back upstairs to speak to Bill, grumbling as he struggled with his tie. "What do we have company for tonight when I—"

Pat fled. She was halfway down the stairs when the doorbell rang. Pat hurried forward, opened the door and then stood staring blankly for a moment. The young man before her was the one she had seen a few hours before with Barbara Courtney.

Fire of unknown origin destroyed Mrs. Mary Riley's barn early last Saturday evening when Ned Bedient saw smoke issuing from the roof and upon opening the door found the entire interior in flames. He hastily summoned Mr. Mason who was in the house and knew nothing of the fire, and he ran his car out of the barn with but very little time to spare. Neighbors hastened to the scene and carried water and the Amboy fire truck, by spraying chemicals, undoubtedly saved the house and adjacent buildings. The barn and most of its contents, consisting of wood, cobs, stored bedding, books, dishes, etc., was completely destroyed. It is understood to be partially covered by insurance.

PILLAR OF SALT

By L. L. R.

Does everyone really vote intelligently in a general election? With the names of scores of candidates before the average voter in his booth, has he the assurance that each name he marks represents the best choice he could possibly make? Since the obvious answer to both these questions is the negative, one concludes that there is something wrong with the American system of representative government.

The average voter learns of political candidates by reading the daily press. Great credit is due American newspapers for the work they do in informing their readers of the facts in this regard. But to expect a newspaper to search out the truth regarding the hundreds of candidates would be to expect the impossible. The most to be hoped for is a review of the merits (or faults) of the men who head the lists; such as those candidates for President, Governor, etc.

Of course, there are no definite figures on the exact number of citizens who mark their ballots blindly. But suppose there are two thirds of all the eligible voters who vote thus, not knowing for whom they vote. The result is far from true representative government. The use of the fraction, two-thirds, was simply arbitrary, but certainly it is not too large.

And so we have an undercurrent often felt but practically ignored by the American citizen. This is the vast army of politicians who use the minor offices as reinforcements for the structure of their several political parties. For them, the long ballot is perfect.

The average American does not make many marks on his ballot, usually putting one X at the top of the list. Since he does this, there are excellent reasons for completely omitting the lesser offices from the list. These jobs are in truth, appointive anyway (although the citizenry is not expected to know it) so why not make them so in external pattern? With the aid of the press, the relentless white light is now turned on the important political candidate. From the cradle to the primaries his life is an open book. But when he is elected, his responsibility to the voters is limited to the duties of the office to which he is elected.

It is hard to fight an unseen enemy. Why not cut the long ballot down to a point where all minor offices in each district, the State, the County, the Township, will be wholly omitted and then require these positions to be filled by appointments from the head of each group of offices? This done, the spotlight should be, and could be, doubled in power. The head of each list could be held accountable to the nth degree for the execution of government.

Dissolving Indebtedness

THE subject of debt looms large on the mental horizon of today. Quite apart from the manifold questions bound up with the consideration of war debts, those sad legacies of strife which so greatly concern the nations at this time, there remains the fact that many individuals are facing a situation in which their assets seem inadequate to meet the liabilities they have incurred. Often, as a result of depreciated currencies, they see the value of their possessions continually diminishing, and begin to question the stability they once accepted as a fixed standard.

It is helpful to examine Jesus' utterances on debt in the light which Christian Science throws upon them. The first mention occurs in the prayer which he gave to his disciples in response to their request that he should teach them to pray. The Master's words, "Forgive us our debts, as we forgive our debtors," are wonderfully illuminated by the spiritual interpretation which Mary Baker Eddy has given them in "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures" (p. 17): "And Love is reflected in love."

Love, then, is the primary solution of this question of debt—the love of God for His children reflected by them to one another. Jesus evidently saw the need of amplifying this subject in a way that would be easily understood by his hearers, for he later expounded it by means of a parable. He told them of a servant who owed a vast sum which he was apparently unable to pay. At his earnest request, however, his lord forgave him this debt. We read that this servant then went out, and finding a fellow servant who owed him a comparatively small amount, "took him by the throat, saying, Pay me that thou owest." And disregarding the debtor's plea for patience, he cast him into prison. Their lord, however, became cognizant of the situation and withdrew his pardon, requiring the creditor to pay his own debt.

It is interesting to notice that neither of these debtors protested his inability to pay or asked for the amount to be reduced. They both prayed the creditor for patience, promising to pay the full amount owing. In the first case it is recorded that his lord had compassion on the servant and forgave him his debt; while in the second the creditor took his fellow servant by the throat, or, metaphorically speaking, established such a "strangle hold" upon him as to render it impossible for him to free himself. It is clear that the mental qualities of patience and compassion extended to one who is in difficulties reassure and help him to win his freedom, while a cruel and unmerciful attitude of thought only tightens his bonds.
